Description

This striking 19th century Belgian Neogothic pedestal table is a beautifully crafted example of Gothic Revival oak furniture, featuring an A-frame trestle base, intricately carved quatrefoil tracery, and a triple arcade of pointed Gothic arches reminiscent of ecclesiastical architecture. The rich, warm patina of the solid oak showcases decades of age and character, while the scalloped fleur-de-lis cresting along the lower stretcher adds an authentic touch of medieval-inspired ornamentation. With its rectangular top and tapered legs, this antique stand is ideal as a pedestal table, plant stand, sculpture display, or decorative accent piece in entryways, libraries, or living spaces. A true conversation piece for collectors of antique Gothic furniture, Belgian oak antiques, or architectural salvage-style decor, this piece brings old-world European craftsmanship and timeless character to any interior.
